For the Birds of the Beach

“...and he knew with practiced ease that he was not bone and feather but a perfect idea of freedom and flight, limited by nothing at all”

-Richard Bach (Jonathan Livingston Seagull, 1970, page 88)

The month of April always brings me back to childhood memories. When I was young, I had a friend named April who lived right down the street. I grew up in a town on Long Island in New York. When most people hear Long Island, New York they think of New York City suburbs. Shopping malls. Movie theaters. I think beach...

In case you missed it, the incredible artist, Ona Christie, interviewed me and it is live on YouTube! You can find it here:

Breaking Free

Ona used photos I had taken of the horses at the United Pegasus Foundation as reference photos for this beautiful new painting titled "Breaking Free". Ona is donating a portion of all of her proceeds for the month of April (and 100% of net proceeds from her "Breaking Free" prints!) to raise funds for the United Pegasus Foundation.

There's still time to make a purchase in April on behalf of the United Pegasus Foundation. Click here for the Original painting or here for Prints. The United Pegasus Foundation currently cares for over 120 horses, primarily ex-racehorses. To learn more about this special nonprofit organization please go to <https://www.unitedpegasus.org/> . I also featured the United Pegasus Foundation in my December 2022 blog.

Stay Inspired!
Wendy
